Easily Built Trough Will Aid Sheepmen

Designed to Cut Labor, Lumber, Space and Feed

An easily built grain or hay trough has proved to be a problem for many sheep growers, but this trough designed by H. M. Briggs, department of animal husbandry,

This trough will save lumber, space and feed for the sheep grower.

Oklahoma agricultural experiment station, will provide the answer to that problem in many cases.

The trough shown in these drawings is intended for mature sheep and will save labor, lumber, space and feed.

As the drawings show, the trough can be built easily by any farm handy-man, if the plan is followed strictly. It should be noted that the trough has its own floor.

If yearling rams are to be fed, the material should be slightly heavier than is shown in the plan.

The center of the pen, according to Briggs, is the most desirable location for this trough. Or several can be placed in a lot or pen. If the trough is placed on a dirt floor or lot, dig a shallow hole under each leg so the trough cannot be pushed about. In a bedded pen, the legs will anchor in the bedding. The trough can be cleaned easily by tipping it up.

Wings for 'Wingless'

Wings for a wingless chicken are provided here by airline stewardess Marilyn Crawford. She is shown holding her very own "wings" to one of Peter Bauman's famed "wingless" chickens, which Bauman is holding in the photo. Four of the chickens were shipped by air to Olean, N. Y., for breeding.

Caution Urged In Use Of Chemicals, Sprays

Dust sprays, gasses and other insecticides will do much to promote the healthy growth of fruits and vegetables is the gist of instruction being passed out now by county agents over the nation.

However, these can often have just the opposite effect on people. Even though the container may not bear the skull and crossbones label, caution is necessary since many substances are harmful in some ways to man, despite the fact that they may not be definitely poisonous.

The whole story of safety in use of insecticides, it was pointed out, is simply precaution.

Technique Is Outlined For Reclaiming Leather

One way to bring mildewed leather back into service in short order, say home management specialists, is to wipe it with a cloth wrung out in diluted alcohol.

Use one cup of denatured alcohol to one cup of water. Then, if necessary, wash with thick suds of mild, neutral soap, or saddle soap; wipe with a damp cloth, and dry in an airy place. When dry polish with good wax dressing.

Woman Has Big Job Watching Gotham Food, Eating Habits

NEW YORK.—How would your other worries compare if you had to worry about the eating habits of eight million people?

That's a thought for women who think they have it tough feeding the family. Mrs. Frances Gonnon is the lady who has the job of advising eight million people how to keep eating without going broke.

She is director of consumers' service and research for the New York city department of markets, which means she keeps an ear to the supermarket floor in order to advise housewives properly on food buying.

With a staff of 17, she sees that the world's largest city is fed—both well and economically.

She runs a marketing service, taking reports from food inspectors who make daily rounds of wholesale-food markets, checking prices, quality and supply, and relaying the reports over the city radio station and through newspapers.

It's down-to-earth, practical talk on selecting, preparing and caring for food; trends in wholesale produce and fish markets, plus low-cost menu suggestions and even recipes.

The idea sprang from the depression, according to Mrs. Gannon, when New York markets were glutted with food and the city decided the best way to hold down waste was to educate the housewife.

Judge Assigns U.S. Marshals To Serve as 'Baby-Sitters'

LEXINGTON, KY. — It isn't often that federal men of any sort are stumped by any assignment, but some U. S. deputy marshals here must have cast a wry eye at Judge H. Church Ford.

At first the court session looked pretty routine to two deputies. Then it happened. A mother, charged with using the mails to defraud, came into the courtroom carrying a baby. Then her sister, who faced the same charge, also entered with a small baby in her arms.

Baby-sitting tasks were given Deputies Charles Webb and General Fugate while Judge Ford heard the cases and placed both women on probation.

Modern Soldier Presents Major Psychological Test

MEXICO CITY.—Today's professional soldier is a much bigger problem to the army psychologist than was the doughboy of 1914-1918. While his wartime problems were growing, the folks back home learned to take war in their stride.

These were conclusions in a report on "war phychoses" by Dr. J. Paraire, medical commander at Val-De-Grace hospital, Paris, France, which was read here before an international congress on military medicine and pharmacy.

Dr. Paraire said that not only were the mental difficulties of the modern soldier more complex, but there were more of them. He said there were three times as many soldiers in World War II as in World War I, and 10 times as many were in hospitals with nervous complaints.

"The second world war shows the curious result of an increase of mental disorders among armies and a decrease among the civil population," he added.

Comparing the two wars, the difference in the type of nervous troubles is striking. The French specialist asserted that hysteria and amnesia (forgetting who one is) had just about disappeared. "In the thousands of sick returning from the fronts we have not found a single traveler without baggage," he reported.

The modern soldier's troubles tend more to show themselves in urinary upsets and disorders in the sexual organs. Dr. Paraire said this increase in complexity represented "a step in human evolution."

Contraband in a Coffin Isn't Always a Corpse

SHANGHAI — Smuggling is so rampant in Shanghai that a code for coffin control has been promulgated by the security bureau of the people's government.

Tradition says when a Chinese dies his body should be shipped to the ancient family burial ground, no matter how remote from the place of death. Some families cannot afford to send the coffins home, but there is a heavy traffic in coffins nevertheless.

Apparently the custom has been used by some for Trojan horse tactics or smuggling contraband. Henceforth, permits must be obtained to move coffins either within the city or to more distant points. Also a reputable person now must issue a "shop guarantee" to insure the shipper's fulfillment of regulations.

The order said that after three violations an undertaker would be required to suspend business. The order also said that the police had been ordered to make a thorough inspection of all coffins at highway exits and harbor embarkation points.

Star of Bethlehem Continues to Puzzle Modern Scholars

Once again Christendom sees the Star of Bethlehem and, like the Wise Men of old, rejoices with exceeding great joy.

Astronomers have discounted possibilities that the star may have been a natural phenomenon since such phenomena occur too far from the earth to serve as any sort of local guide. Modern opinion is, however, inclined to hold that there was a Star — although the story probably has been touched by Oriental imagery.

St. Matthew suggests that even the Wise Men may have lost sight of the star while they were in Jerusalem; hence, they rejoiced when it reappeared to their vision as they approached the Manger of Bethlehem.

Come to think of it, astronomers have sought an astronomically authentic star — and found it not; historians have sought an historically human Jesus of Nazareth —and are still arguing whether or not they have found Him: even zealous theologians, striving to harmonize messianic and eschatological theories with the illusive historical and human Jesus, have sometimes lost sight of the Babe in the Manger Who from His lowly stable drawn unto Himself all who are weary and heavy-laden.

Pressing close to that sacred Manger, Christendom glimpses the Star of Bethlehem once more and rejoices in the light of righteousness and peace which has conquered every tyranny that evil men could think of, the light that shineth in the darkness and shall not fail.

Finns See Evergreen As Mourning Symbol

Evergreens are never used as decorations in the homes and churches of Finland because the Finns regard them as symbols of mourning.

At Christmas most homes where there are children suspend a "heaven" from the living room or dining room ceiling. Such "heavens" consist of a cord framework covered with straw and different colors of paper ribbon, etc., and decorated with paper stars and there were three times as many soldiers in World War II as in World War I, and 10 times as many were in hospitals with nervous complaints.

Candles are used profusely in the churches; the altars are banked and the windows are filled with them, so that in the pre-dawn darkness (Christmas morning services begin at 6 A.M.) the churches beckon approaching worshippers like brilliant lanterns.

After the early church services, the gayly decorated sleds race for home, bright robes flying and sleigh bells a-jingling. Breakfast is festive, and then everyone takes a long nap. Christmas Day is not devoted to play or gift-giving; it is religiously observed with intervals of carol singing and Bible readings.

The day after Christmas is St. Stephen's day, and from then until New Year's parties and general festivity are in order. Although gift-giving is not an integral part of the observances, in some parts of Finland trinkets and useful gifts of wearing apparel are presented to children by Wainamoinen, the Kalevala hero of Finnish legend.

Legend relates that the crown of thorns which was placed on the head of Jesus was made of holly and that before the crucifixion the berries were white, but turned crimson like drops of blood.

Hems of Hockey Skirts Change Little in Years

JOHANNESBURG.—Six inches is the measurement which links 40 years in the history of women's hockey, according to Mrs. F. Connor, a veteran whose playing days date back to the early days in South Africa.

In 1909 skirts were worn six inches above the ankle; now they are worn six inches above the knee. Regulation uniform then was a white shirtwaist, a tie, and a dark, flared skirt.

As long hair was the vogue, players wore knitted caps to keep their tresses up.
